WEATHER OF CONCERN

Weather of Concern

- Dry weather expected until another storm system moves into Northern California Sunday through Monday.
- A trough of low pressure will bring some light precipitation to Southern California west of the mountains this morning, as well as strong winds in the mountains and on the desert slopes. Hazardous travel conditions will be possible in some areas due to wet/slick roads.

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County:

- <https://alerts-v2.weather.gov/counties/CA>

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

 Locally Heavy Rainfall Possible Mendocino and Wine Country Burn Areas Late Sunday/Early Monday *****

Partly cloudy, dry and cool weather with light northerly winds will prevail on Saturday.

The next system will reach the north coast early Sunday and gradually move inland and southward throughout the day and evening with SE-SW winds gusting to 25-35 mph in exposed areas and 40-50 mph in wind-prone higher spots. This system is expected to produce moderate to heavy rainfall (0.25-0.50 inches per hour) for a few hours Sunday afternoon and early evening near the burn areas of Mendocino County and in the Sonoma and Napa County burn areas Sunday evening. Snow levels will be 4000 ft in the north and 5000 ft in the south, and drop by 1000 ft early Monday. By the time this system exits the region late Monday rainfall equivalent totals will be 1.50-3.00 inches in the coastal areas from the North Bay northward, 0.50-1.50 inches in the remainder of the Bay Area, in the northern Sacramento Valley, and in the Sierra-Cascade range, and areas east of the crest and in the southern Sacramento Valley will see 0.50 inches or less.

A third system will move in early Tuesday with gusty winds and exit late Thursday. Snow levels with this system will drop to 1500 ft in the north and 2500 ft in the south on Thursday. More wet unsettled weather will follow during week 2.

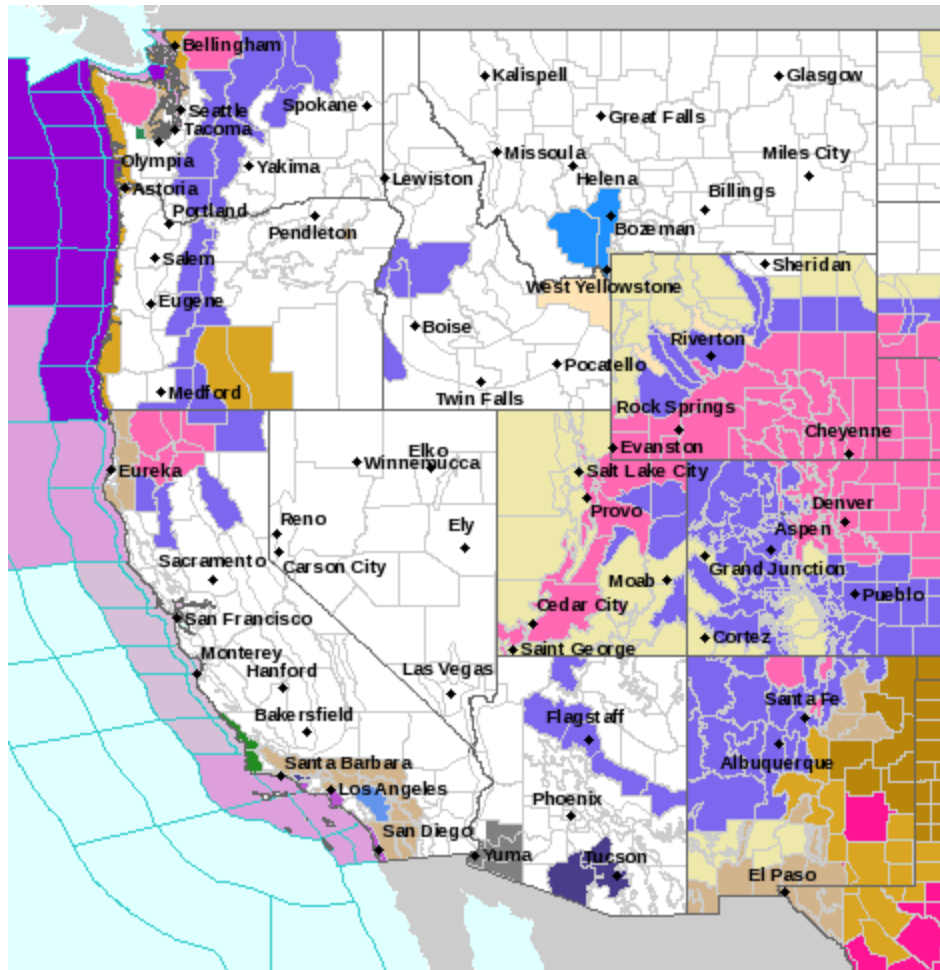

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

A cold upper level low pressure system will bring a chance of showers to Southwest California tonight, with a threat of snow showers lingering into Saturday morning across the north facing mountain slopes. The greatest threat of showers will shift to the north facing mountain slopes and some interior valley locations, such as the Cuyama Valley foothills. Any additional shower activity over the Montecito area is expected to be very light. The main impacts with this system will be colder temperatures (with snow levels lowering to between 3000 and 4000 feet Friday afternoon into Saturday morning) and strong northwest winds. Snow accumulations will generally be 1 to 2 inches, but local amounts up to 5 inches are possible across the higher elevations of the north facing slopes. Interstate 5 near the Grapevine could see snow showers accumulating to 1 to 2 inches Friday afternoon into Saturday morning, along with strong northwest to north winds, which could cause significant travel impacts.
